NEWS

The USD is weak and all G10 currencies are showing impressive strength into year-end. Overnight developments have been limited and funding pressures have eased considerably, allowing for an extension of EUR gains to fresh multi-month highs at levels last seen in late September. NOK and SEK are outperforming, along with GBP, NZD and EUR. CHF, JPY and AUD are showing modest gains. CAD is a relative underperformer and gold is flat. The broader tone is mixed, given weakness across most European equity indices with the exception of the FTSE. U.S. equity futures are hinting to a positive open. Developed country bond yields are climbing modestly and undercutting the USD as U.S. yields consolidate. Commodities are mixed with oil testing fresh multi-year highs as copper relinquishes a portion of its recent rally. There are no scheduled U.S. releases for Friday's NA session.

TECHNICALS TIPS

GBP/USD-

GBPUSD has broken the 1.3510 level and failed to break 1.3558 level because of incorrect news was floated in the market regarding china's slow down of US bond buying but this was a fake news and momentum came last day was the result of that. So, today prices can touch the 1.3510 levels and it may range below this level.
