MAJOR NEWS

- The dollar edged lower in early European trading Friday, but remains near multi-month highs on the back of rising optimism about the U.S. economic recovery, helped by a strong rollout of coronavirus vaccines. The latest indication of the strength of the U.S. economic recovery came from Thursday's weekly jobless claims data, which showed the number of people filing last week fell to a one-year low of 684,000 from the 781,000 claims filed during the previous week. Later in the session the final print of the University of Michigan sentiment reading for March is expected to tick up as stimulus checks arrive and the country starts to reopen. Focus will turn to the release of the keenly-watched German business sentiment release later in the day, with the Ifo index expected to climb to 93.2 in March from 92.4 the previous month.

- The pound rose strongly against the dollar Friday on economic data showing U.K. retail sales rebounded last month, but cable is set to end a second-straight week in the red as experts flag speed bumps ahead. "Growing UK vaccine rollout and escalating post-Brexit tensions with the EU to cloud the UK economic outlook even after lockdown conditions are lifted in Q2. The US economy to boom in Q2," Crédit Agricole said. The pound has recently moved in tandem with the risk assets, which may prove to be its undoing amid expectations for a bumpy second quarter. As well as an expected souring in risk appetite, forecasts for an ongoing rise in U.S. Treasury yields will boost the dollar, keeping a lid on cable. "Our analysis suggests that overvalued GBP/USD ... fair value of 1.3450 could be one of the best G10 FX hedges against the twin risks of elevated UST yields and risk aversion in the second quarter," Crédit Agricole added.
